The Magic Shop

By H. G. Wells Read the story.

Then answer the questions. I had seen the Magic Shop from afar several times; a shop window of alluring little objects, magic balls, packs of cards that looked all right, but never had I thought of going in until one day, Gip hauled me by my finger right up to the window. 'If I was rich,' said Gip, dabbing a finger at the Disappearing Egg, 'I'd buy myself,' he said, and laid my hand on the door-handle and we came into the shop. It was a magic shop. It was a little, narrow shop, not very well lit. There were several crystal spheres, a china hand holding magic cards, a stock of magic fish-bowls. On the floor were magic mirrors; one to draw you out long and thin, and one to make you short and fat; and while we were laughing at these the shop man, came in. There he was behind the counter a curious, dark man, with one ear larger than the other and a chin like the toe-cap of a boot. 'What can we have the pleasure?' he said, 'I want,' I said, 'to buy my little boy a few simple tricks, anything amusing?' said I. 'Um!' said the shop man. Then, he drew from his head a glass ball. 'Something in this way?' he said, and held it out. 'That's good,' I said, with a laugh. 'How much will that be?' I asked. 'We make no charge for glass balls,' said the shop man. 'We get them' he picked one out of his elbow as he spoke 'free.' He produced another from the back of his neck, and laid it on the counter. He turned to Gip with a smile. 'You, you know, are the Right Sort of Boy.' 'It's only the Right Sort of Boy gets through that doorway,' said the shop man. He said, addressing himself to Gip, 'before you came in, that you would like one of our, "Buy one and astonish your Friends" boxes?' Gip, after a gallant effort, said 'Yes.' 'It's in your pocket.' 'Paper,' he said, and took a sheet out of the empty hat with the springs; 'string,' and behold his mouth was a string-box, and then he lit a candle and stuck one of his fingers into the flame, and so sealed the parcel. 'Then there was the Disappearing Egg,' he remarked, also 'The Crying Baby'. I handed each parcel to Gip as it was ready, and he clasped them to his chest.

Sarah Miller is in New York. She is writing a letter to her best friend.

Dear Sophia, how are you? How is London? I am having a very good time in New York. It's Sunday and it's sunny and warm. Now it's ten in the morning and we are in Central Park. I am sitting under a tree, I am listening to my radio... and I am writing to you, of course. My Canadian cousin Rosemary is here with me, she is reading a comic. She's very pretty. She's tall and slim and she has got long wavy brown hair. Her parents are in Toronto. My father is reading The New York Times, an American newspaper. My mother is playing with my little brother Jimmy on the grass and they are eating popcorn. There are many people in the park. Some men are jogging, two girls are walking their dogs, and an old man is skating! And he can do that quiet well. We often come to this fantastic park, in this wonderful city, because we are relaxing here. But sometimes we visit other interesting places: museums, shops, galleries, etc... New York is great! There are many fantastic skyscrapers, great shops and there are people everywhere!
Love, Sarah.
