The Legend of Gelert the Dog

The story takes place in the 13th century. Prince Llywelyn was a hunter, so he spent much of his time outside his palace. He had many hunting dogs, but one day when he called with his horn, his most favorite dog Gelert didn't appear. So, sadly, Llywelyn had to go hunting without him.

When Llywelyn returned from the hunt, he was greeted by Gelert, who came jumping towards him... his jaws dripping with blood.

The Prince was shocked, and had a horrible thought: Was it the blood of his one-year old son? He went into the child's bedroom and saw the upturned cradle and the walls spattered with blood! He searched for the child but there was no sign of him. Llywelyn was convinced that his gentlest dog had killed his son.

With his sword he took Gelert's life.

Then, Llywelyn heard a child crying underneath the cradle. It was his son, unharmed!

Beside the child was the biggest wolf he had ever seen: dead, killed by the brave Gelert.

Llywelyn was devastated and carried the body of his faithful dog outside the castle and buried him where everyone could see the grave of the boldest animal of all and hear the story of his brave fight with the wolf.
