A shower in India

Many years ago in India, an important local chief invited an English lady to be the first person to use the new shower-the first one in that part of the continent. The lady went into the bathhouse, turned on the taps and got into the nice, warm water. But while she was taking her shower, she looked up and became frightened to see an eye watching her through a hole. She got out, dressed and ran outside. She saw an old man there. He was carrying a petrol container of hot water in one of cold water in the other. In front of him were two funnels.

'Why were you watching me in my bath?' the lady asked him angrily.

The man answered politely, 'I have to see which tap you turn on, madam, so I know if I pour in hot or cold water'.
